

The Sound of Success for Bo'ness Company

11 September 2009

Bo'ness company Ward Steedsy has been nominated as a finalist in the first Audio Pro Industry Excellence Awards. Chosen by readers of Audio Pro magazine, the audio hire and sales business has been shortlisted in the Best New Company category with the winners to be announced in October following judging by a panel of industry experts.

The company was launched in January 2008 by Steven Ward and David "Steedsy" Stevenson with the aim of providing customers with the best sound possible for their budget and has since established a wide customer base, supplying PA systems for T in the Park and The Wickerman Festival among other events. Ward Steedsy's policy of continuous investment in the latest technology and industry leading brands has contributed to the company's success as co-founder Steven Ward explains:

"We are delighted to be nominated for this award which is recognition of our hard work and achievements since launching the company just last year. We have built up a strong customer base by maintaining focus on what the customer wants and keeping a "can-do" attitude from the first contact until the event or hire is concluded.

"Despite the recession we are optimistic about the future and foresee a busy few months ahead leading into an even busier 2010. We are looking forward to working with even more customers to provide audio at its best."
